

“If Western civilization does not now respond constructively to the challenge to banish racism, some future historian will have to say that a great civilization died because it lacked the soul and commitment to make justice a reality for all men.”

“Among the moral imperatives of our time, we are challenged to work all over the world with unshakable determination to wipe out the last vestiges of racism. . . . Racism is no mere American phenomenon. Its vicious grasp knows no geographical boundaries.”

Where Do We Go From Here: Chaos or Community? (1967) [New York: Harper]